DATE-: 24th November 2021

The Finance and Investment Cell, Aryabhata College, in collaboration with the Mexican Embassy in India, participated in the inter-university dialogue on 'Mexico-India Global Role in a Post-COVID19 World' an event that set up a conversation between the youth of the two nations. FIC Aryabhata was the sole representative from the Delhi University at the event. 12 students from our society participated in the Inter-University Dialogue.

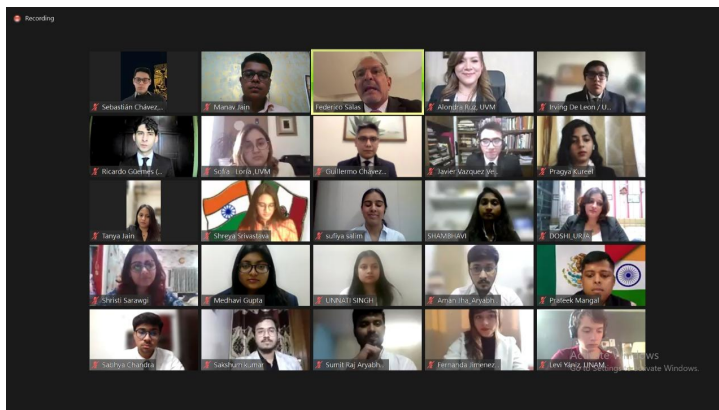

Through the healthy exchange of ideas, an effort is being made to further enhance the already friendly relations between the two countries. India and Mexico share a very cordial and warm relationship. From the lush green Sierra Madre to the lofty Himalayas many threads connect India and Mexico in a dynamic mesh of relationship, touching many lives across both tries. As we move ahead into the third decade of this century, the countries need to further deepen their relationship to a new level.

Coming out of a pandemic, health has the potential to be one of the most important facets of our shared relationship. India and Mexico have developed to be the regional hub of medical tourism. Both countries can provide cheap yet the most professional medical and health services for the neighbouring countries. This amazing feat can be achieved and further deepened as the two countries share valuable expertise.

India and Mexico share a very long history of overcoming colonial powers, but unfortunately, they are still denied their legitimate demand of an appropriate representation at the council which is buried under the weight of archaic world order. Both the countries have a mutual interest in free and open Indo-pacific and hence are natural partners in upholding the rules-based order of the high seas.

Both the nations already host an extensive network of Innovation and Technology Industries that are pioneers in their respective fields. A working collaboration between Bangalore, the IT hub of India, and Guadalajara, the Silicon Valley of Mexico, can do wonders in creating the next-gen innovation which can impact many lives.

The event helped the students from both nations share ideas and explore shared avenues to deepen the relationship between the two nations. A contact group was formed for the participants to constantly explore the culture of the two nations. The Embassy of Mexico reaffirmed their long-standing understanding with FIC Aryabhata and resolved to host more such events for the students.
