SOME OF THE THOUGHTS OF VIKRAM ADITYA REGARDING QUEERNESS

- The goal was to problematize the idea that visibility is a good thing .
- Queer people are asked to declare their identities ; stepping out of the closets.
- Sir defined closet as a dark space where there are no fabulous clothes but some type of shame.
- An intrinsic part of queerness or the queer political imagination is about visibility, and it's assumed that the greater the visibility, the greater will be the kind of recognition and the more greater political power one will enter.
- Visibility helped fight the anti-sodomy law i.e. section 377.
- He gave examples of Bollywood movies and celebrities where they have to come out of their closet .
- Who is in the closet? When does this closet come into being? For whom is the closet relevant? We all fall in love in order to make the love true and successful. For queer people to exist it is important that they declare themselves to be queer. A loves B where A is already in love and it comes into B's knowledge that he's being loved by A. In that case, the closet is fiction for straight people. It is not the queer person who's in closet. it is the straight person who buys the declaration of the queer person and imagines a closet retroactively.
- Queerness is polyvalent; full of many kinds of gestures. I can be queer in many ways even without declaring that, " I am gay", " I am lesbian " or "I am trans". It is only to the other person that declaration is important; coming out/ visibility is important for heteronormative society , not to the queer person as a queer person can live it's life without telling anything exactly like you can love someone without telling them.
- Imagination of EQUALITY in country is one of ' LIKENESS' i.e., ' I'm just like you' , ' My humanity is just like yours' , 'My love is just like yours'.
- Queerness is treated exactly like a person from any Muslim country like Pakistan, Afghanistan, etc. Your profession will not be considered at this point whether you are a carpenter, a doctor, a tailor; you'll always be recognized as a terror to humanity. One example is Shah Rukh Khan's movie, 'MY NAME IS KHAN' where he spent his entire life proving that yes, he is a Khan but not a terrorist.

- It is the anxiety of straight people that asks queer people to be visible.
- The colonial doctors and people were seen to have shown more interest in identifying and having a more visible picture of queer people.
- Law is blind for ages and is believed to be so whereas the current public and administration are very anxious in seeing things (in contrast to queerness).
- People in the country are judged by their physical identity. A rich or a well-developed person will be given more preference than a sex worker or a trans or a poor claiming for justice. This also happens with Adivasi women or Dalit women and so on.
- 60% of India's prison population is made up of Adivasis, Dalits and Muslims.
- Queerness privileges other people looking at queer people rather than their life itself so it devalues the life of queer people.

CONCLUDING SESSION

In the end the volunteers and professors asked their questions regarding queerness, sex violation and inequality.

So, this leads to the end of this very informative webinar at 5 pm.
