Our very first episode was with Mr. Michael Kugelman who is currently serving as Deputy Director of the Asia program and Senior Associate of South Asia for Wilson Center. He discussed the terrorism issues between India and Pakistan, how each of the countries can help each other on river issues and health issues, and shutting up the operations of terrorism. After a brief discussion, then he also appreciated the roles of Indian farmers, and according to him the reforms in the agricultural sector is needed in India, since water shortage is the major issue.

In the session, Mr. Kugelman also discussed the issues faced by the lower family income groups during this pandemic and has also suggested some solutions. Lastly, we had a fun rapid-fire round where personal preference and life questions were asked.
